

Simplicity – the Ultimate in Sophistication

Simplicity as a result of a creative process is “the ultimate sophistication”, as Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519) said. Indeed, simplicity is the essence for maximum grasp of a subject, at Clear Designs it allows the practice to provide a definitive architectural and interior design service with a difference.

Based in Loughton, Essex, Clear Designs’ philosophy is to create unique, innovative and practical architectural and interior design solutions that give equal consideration to a client’s space and their aspirations. Moreover, the practice provides a highly personal and efficient service, achieved without creating confusion with technical information and building terminology. This is, of course, particularly important when dealing with private clients on high end residential projects.

Anyone who has ever dealt with an architect knows that it can be a daunting task; especially trying to get to grips with industry jargon – and that’s without such minefields as planning and building regulations. The fact is that clients can often come away from a meeting knowing less than when they went in! Clear Designs, however, assists and guides the client through the entire process ... in language that is understandable for all. This progressive approach has reaped considerable rewards for the practice, which has doubled in size over the last year; an impressive feat at a time when many businesses are struggling and downsizing. At the present time, Clear Designs, which operates primarily within Essex and Hertfordshire & surrounding counties, is active on a number of fascinating projects. A barn conversion in Coopersale, a timber framed house in Loughton’s conservation area and a glass box extension also in Loughton. In addition to local projects, they have a fascinating project in London’s Highgate, a conversion of a church in a conservation area into 14 high specification units. As with the majority of its projects, this is carried out as an architectural / interior design ‘package’, an approach that helps to create a finished product that is individual to each client – be it luxurious, relaxed, minimalist, or traditional. The team at Clear Designs has extensive experience in every aspect of architecture and design, encompassing retail and residential work from conceptual design to project management on projects ranging from 10 weeks to 30 months duration. Architecture and design are the most visible and public of the arts. They impinge on our lives at every level of habitation, from our homes, workspaces, entertainment and retail spaces through to places of learning and worship. Good architecture brings benefits to people both as individuals and as communities. These benefits are both practical and cultural and have value both for our present and our future. Consequently, at Clear Designs they ensure that every aspect of their work not only looks beautiful, but also fulfils its function. To find out more, visit www.cleardesigns.uk.com.
